I use to enjoy working out at the health spa. I had went three times a week until I hurted my back shoveling snow. As I laid in bed recuperating, I decide to return as soon as possible. However, now that I have recover, I still have not start back. I have began to jog again; in fact, yesterday I ran by the spa but choose not to stop. I should have ran in there and exercise awhile. Today I seen a guy who used to exercise the same days I done. He ask me how I is doing, and I felted embarrassed about not continuing my workouts. I've came to the conclusion I should start visiting the spa again. Lately, I have chose to do other things, but I have always knew I should make time for exercise. I could raise at dawn and visit the spa before breakfast, or I could driven there after work. I have wrote this as I set at my desk, thinking how nice it would feel to be laying in the sauna. I might also have swam a few laps as part of my workout. What a relaxing thought. Starting tomorrow, it's back to the spa!
