Business Analysis Subject of Sinclair Boot Camp

Dayton, Ohio – The Workforce Development division of Sinclair Community College will offer a four-day Business Analyst Boot Camp August 9-12.

It's only in recent years that business analysis has begun to be recognized as a profession in its own right. While people have been performing the Business Analyst role in organizations for several decades, differing definitions of the role abound. The Business Analyst Boot Camp will explore some of them, as well as help participants gain a clear understanding of where the industry appears to be heading and some emerging standards for the profession.

The Boot Camp presenter is Robert D. Keith, a Certified Project Manager and Certified Business Analysis Professional. He has more than 30 years of Information Technology expertise, encompassing business analysis and process development and delivery, project management, and program management consulting. Keith has been a project manager on more than 100 IT projects, actively using business analysis techniques of process and data modeling in their delivery. His experience includes full project life cycle activities, program management, PMI and CMM policies, standards and procedures, and project assessments.

Anyone involved in business analysis would benefit from this class including:

- Business customer, user or partner
- Business Analyst
- Business Systems Analyst
- Systems Analyst
- Project Manager or Team Leader
- Systems Architect or Designer
- IT Manager/Director
- Systems or Application Developer
- QA Professional
- Systems Tester
- Anyone wanting to enhance their business analysis skills

The Business Analyst Boot Camp will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. August 9-12 at Sinclair's Learning Center at Miami Valley Research Park, 1900 Founders Dr. in Kettering.
