Sinclair to Offer Compression Planning Seminar

Dayton, Ohio – The Workforce Development & Corporate Services division at Sinclair Community College will offer a two-and-one-half day highly interactive Compression Planning seminar June 9-11.

Compression Planning is a powerful meeting facilitation process that ensures the group's combined energy and innovative thinking is captured and the ultimate desired outcomes are reached quickly, effectively, and at least 30% faster. It provides a reliable, structured way to pull all of the pieces of information together, clarify what's next, recognize what's missing, and implement an action plan.

The seminar will be presented by Jerry McNellis, founder of Compression Planning, and his staff.

"I attended the training session in 1990 and I've been using it ever since," said Neil Herbkersman, Director of Grants Development at Sinclair. "Compression Planning shortens the amount of time you invest in the planning of a project, and you get better outcomes as well. It's true it shortens the planning time, and you end up with a more effective plan. I've used it over 100 times at the college and in the community. It's phenomenal."

The fee for the Compression Planning seminar is $1,995. The registration deadline is May 26.
