Great Hall, Building 12

Open to all students whether you're graduating this spring or wanting to learn more about the local job market. This is a great avenue to start networking with a wide variety of local employers. Explore potential internship availabilities; learn more about opportunities in the region and where you can position yourself after graduation.

Displaced Worker Today, Employee Tomorrow

Friday, May 18, 2012

9:30 a.m. - 11:30 a.m.

Marketplace, Building 7, Room 7006

Ever wonder how other displaced workers survived transitioning back into college after being displaced? Learn from a panel of displaced workers on challenges that they faced and how they made it to the end of their education. In addition, these previous students will also discuss how they were able to enter back into the workforce. What better way to learn, then from those who have gone before you. This unique opportunity will allow for an open discussion to learn how others overcame barriers you may be facing today and how to succeed!

Through the help and support of the Displaced Workers Office, and funding from Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA), I was able to earn an Associate's Degree in Electronic Engineering Technology. Being able to enhance my skills and knowledge within the electronic and electrical field, has allowed for a new opportunity. I am now working as an electrician and programmer for ConAgra Foods.
