One reason that I enjoy the commute to school is that the drive gives me uninterrupted time to myself. The classes and socializing at college is great, and so is the time I spend with my family, but sometimes all this togetherness keeps you from being able to think. In fact, I look forward to the time I have alone it gives me a chance to plan what I'll accomplish in the days ahead. For example, one Tuesday afternoon my history professor announces that a rough outline for our semester report was due that Friday. Fortunately, I had already done some reading, and I had checked my proposed topic with her the week before. Therefore, on the way home in the car that evening, I planned the entire history report in my mind. Then all I had to do when I got home was quickly jot it down before I forgot it. When I handed the professor the outline at 8:30 Wednesday morning. She asked me "if I had stayed up all night working on it.

In the unending war of people versus machines, a blow was struck by a man in Pennsylvania who had a run-in with an automatic banking machine. At about ten o'clock one night, he approached the machine to make a withdrawal. After he inserted his card the machine spat it back at him. The same thing happen a second time. He put his card in again, this time the machine kept the card. And did not give him the money he had requested. By now the customer was totally disgusted. Hitting the machine with all his strength, the card still did not come back. This was the last straw he grabbed a metal trash can and proceeded to beat up the machine. Unfortunately, the machine still had his card, and the man was later arrested and charged with causing $2,500 worth of damage. He didn't mind. "I have been ripped off so often, he said, "that it was time for me to get even."
